JAEHNE IS OUT OF PRISON.

HE SAYS HE HAS NO HIDDEN PILE OF MONEY TO DRAW ON.

Warden Bill Brown Has Not Lost All His Money at Poker to the Prisoner-Jackne Rejoins His Family in Greenville. Fx-Alderman Henry W. Jachne, the first of the boodle Aldermen to be convicted and sent to prison, was released from Sing Sing at 8:50 o clock resterday morning. Rumor intimates that on Friday night the ex-Alderman and Warden Bill Brown sat down to a very quiet came down to New York on an early train yea-"It is said that Jachne is a very good poker player. Warden," remarked a fellow pas-game of noker. Rumor also insinuates that

Warden Bill Brown did not win. The Warden

He has had plenty of opportunities to prepare himself." said the Warden, with a serious countenance. "By many little games, I suppose," said his interlocutor. 'No; by thinking," said Warden Brown. "But I've got enough with mestill," continued the Warden, hastily, and he puiled out a revolver and rested it on his knes. Then he took s big bundle wrapped in a newspaper and opened it. Inside was a large envelope, very at and bulky. With one hand on his revolver Warden Brown opened the envelope and waved several thick bundles of greenbacks.

Jachne slipped out of prison very quietly. The gray of early morning had not yet brightwhen Chief Clerk Dillon opened the offices of the prison. Jachne was ready to appear. He had got up shortly after 5 o'clock, had breakfasted hurriedly on ham and eggs. and had paced restlessly to and fro awaiting the arrival of the clerk. At 6:25 o'clock Jashne and a fellow convict, John Hogan, were brought up to the office. Hogan had been sentenced to Sing Sing for three years and four months on March 25, 1890, for assault. Good behavior let him out yesterday with Jachne smiled pleasantly as he entered the office and bade Clerk Dillon good morning. He wore a black frock coat and waistcoat and dark blue striped trousers with a faint line of gray in them. A bright blue ready-made four-in-hand tie hid part of the bosom of a new shirt and fitted enugly into the opening of a turn-over collar with a wide roll. The clothes had been sent to him by friends in this city. Jachne's appearance was greatly changed and much improved. He stood erect with his head thrown far back. His hair and moustache had been allowed to grow. His skin lacked the pallor common to convicts who have been really confined for any length of time. He seemed to appreciate Warden Brown's extreme courtesy in allowing him to go fully two hours before the customary time for releasing prisoners. How old are you. Jachne?" seked Clerk Dillon. dark blue striped trousers with a faint line of

"How old are you. Jashne?" asked Clerk Dillon.

"Forty-six." said the ex-Alderman.

When Clerk Dillon told him to step on the scales, Jashne almost jumped across the room. He weighed 148 pounds, ten pounds more than when he entered the prison. During his confinement he was sick only once. Last August, while he was working packing tobacco he got intermittent fever. He was transferred to the hospital aword and, after his recovery. Dr. Irvine kept him there. Jashne and Police Sergeant Crowley washed the dishes and swept the ward. Had it not been for his lilness Jashne would have been much stouter. For more than a year past he has slept in the extension, where the quarters are more comfortable. He has had a very easy prison life. After weighing out, as it were, Jachne turned again to the clerk's desk.

"Jashne" said Clerk Pillon. "you were sentenced to this prison on May 21, 1886, for nine years and ten months. Commutation for good behavior has reduced your tenn to six years four months and twenty-live days. Your term expires to-day."

Jachne then said that he had a wife and four children; that he was born in New York; that he was in good bealth, and that he was a Protestant. Clerk Dillon gave him $23, $13 of which Jachne sarned during his imprisonment at the rate of a few cents a week. He had also $12.21 to his credit when he entered ling Sing, but he had sent that money to his wife some time ago.

ment at the rate of a few cents a week. He had also $42.21 to his credit when he entered hing Sing, but he had sent that money to his wile some time ago.

"That's all, Jaehne. Good-by," said Dillon. "Good-by," said the ex-Alderman, as he burried out of the office into the public roadway, It was then d:55 o'clock. The mist was just beginning to lift from the river. Jaehne drew a long breath and looked around him, He took off his black slouch hat and passed his hand scross his forehead. Clerk Dillon came out of the office, and he and Jaehne started for the railroad station. Jaehne carried a light evercat on his left arm.

"I'm through at last," he said to the reporter. "It has been long and hard. I am going to live down the past."

"Was your treatment in prison what you

Nover knowingly violated any prison regulation.

"Your plans for the future?"

"They are as yet unsetfied. I am going to may home in Greenville, N.J., where my wife, may mother, and my boys are. I shall live there are successful to a time. There is one thing that is not true. I have not any sum of money, great or smail, hiden away. When I say that I am going out to begin again I mean it in every way."

Jashne intended taking the 7:05 train from Man Sing Sing to New York, but he missed it by about two minutes.

"You had better take the train to Croton, and go home from there," suggested Dillion. It will say a your being seen.

"No. Sit," said Jashne firmly, "I am a free man. No one has any claim on me now. A free man does not run away. I leave from here."

He walked north of the station and went into the Phanix Hotel for a moment. Coming out, he crossed the railroad tracks and walked slowly to and for a short distance north of the depat until the 7:23 train arrived. He got aboard and started for this city. No one spoke to him on the train save one man, who inquired ine were ex-Alderman Jachne. Jachne declined to answer any suestions asked him by the inquired. Jachne's brother Ernest Jachne tradels Sing Sing a few minutes after the ex-Alderman had left. Warden Brown much him and came down to this city with him on the 8:21 train.

The ex-Alderman reached this city at 8:30 octock. No one was at the depot to most firm He was one of the first to alight. Jashne was born in this city forty-six years ago. He was apprenticed to a jeweller when he was 14 years old and worked with him until his brother. Frederick Jachne, started a jeweller store, at 374 Broome street, taking Henry into partnership with him. The two brothers conducted a pseullar business until 1871, when frederick Jachne was found dead in the river off fort Washington. His clothes were found on the river bank. Henry continued the business and married his trother's widow. In 1885 he cold out the store to his clerk. Henry Alters, who gave him notes which were never paid.

Jachne became prominent in politics in 1882 under Mike Norton, the County Democracy leader of the old Ninth ward. He was then living at 43 Vandam street. He was elected an Alderman, and was re-elected in 1882, 1883, 1884, and 1885, each year with an increased majority. In the early part of 1884 he became prominent as a supporter of Jacob Sharp's scheme to gobble up the Broadway railroad tranchise. His constituents re-elected him in 1885, although many of the Aldermen of the 1884 Board were defeated.

A Senate committee investigated the actions of the Board, and the evidence they are said to have procured was laid before the District Attorney. It was before this committee that Mrs. Schuyler Hamilton testified that some sliverware stolen from her had been recovered from Jachne, who paid her 31,000 to settle the case. Two days after this Inspector Byrnes announced that Jachne had made confession to him about the Broadway briberry. Byrnes said that Jachne had gone to him in despair and asked him to have District Attorney Martine, John R. Fellows, and De Lancey Nicoll conducted the prosecution. On May 10, 1885. Roger A. Pryor, Richard Newcombe, and John Graham defended him. District Attorney Martine, John R. Fellows, and De Lancey Nicoll conducted the prosecution. On May 10, 1885. CAPT. POLLARD'S RESIGNATION. Members of the Seventh Regiment Ask Him

Although Capt. Daniel Alonzo Pollard of Company C, the senior Captain of the Seventh Regiment, has sent in his resignation, Col. Appleton has not accepted it, and a strong effort is being made to have it withdrawn. The resignation has been in Col. Appleton's hands for two weeks, and has not been for-hands for two weeks, and has not been forwarded to brigade headquarters. Capt. Polard did not parade on Weinesday because his resignation was pending. He has an excellent reputation as a drill master, and the members of his company feel that they cannot afford to lose him.

Capt. Pollard says he tendered his resignation because he had grown weary of military life. He entered the Seventh on May 2, 1830, and served as a corporal until 1801. In 1803 he was elected Captain. He did not know until yesterday that a netition had been prepared requesting him to withdraw his resignation. He said he would take time to consider it before giving any decision.

Capt. Pollard is connected with the Consolidated Gas Company. Should his resignation be accepted it is probable that First Lieut. John McDougall will succeed him.

EXBIBITS HIS SHIP FOR A LIVING.

The Old Saller of Sixth Avenue Arrested for Collecting a Crowd. A familiar figure in Sixth avenue is the old sallor who exhibits a wooden ship rolling fear-fully in a canvas sea, a device, as the placard on the outside informs the public, invented and manufactured by the owner. Policeman Mangam of the Thirtieth street station arrested him on Friday afternoon, and he was locked up over night. Yesterday morning he was arraigned at Jesterson Market, where he said he was Robert Steele, 60 years old. He was unable to work, he said, and managed to pick up a living by exhibiting his ship, which he had shown in Sixth avenue for more than a year without anybody's objecting until the policeman arrested him. He didn't know why he had been arrested.

Peliceman Mangam said the old sailor had caused a crowd to collect. Justice White said that he would have to fine Steele $5. Then, just as the old sailorn's wife, an electly woman dressed in the uniform of the Salvation Army, was coming forward with $5 in her hand to pay the line, Justice White remitted it, and the couple left the court room arm in arm, with happy faces. was arraigned at Jefferson Market, where he

The Show is Over, and John is Ready to Young John McBride is here for business, so he says. He is 12 years old, and, up to within a few days, lived with his uncle, Patrick Corcoran, who is superintendent of a stone quarry at Turners, N. Y. On Wednesday last his uncle gave him a dollar to come to this city and see the celebration, suggesting that John had better stay if he could strike a job. John had sold papers on the trains for two years, and the prospect of work didn't dismay him at all. He saw the celebration, and by Friday night found he had only a quarter left. At 3 o'clock yesterday morning Charles P. Reilly, a carpenter, found the lad on Verey street, near Broadway, looking for a cheap lodging house. Reilly took him to Police Headquarters, gave him $1.25, and left him. Yesterday the bey was taken before Justice Whiten IJefferson Market Court and committed to the cars of the tierry Society. John says if they will give him a chance be can support himsels selling papers. He doesn't care to go back to Turners as he wants to live in New York.

A Man with a Jag and a Label. A good-looking man about thirty-five, with a large-sized jag. staggered along Greenwich street yesterday morning. He and the jag stratched out in front of 163 Greenwich street. A clork painted on a big piece of cardboard:

"One who celebrated the anniversary of the discovery of America." He tied this on the breast of the man with the ing. Hundreds crowded around to get a look at the picture. Finally a big cop appeared, and, after pulling the man's ears, put him on his feet and started him toward the Battery, jag and all.

Perhaps a Sedute Person Will Hereufter Care for Their Grandmother.

Mary and Cornelia Odell, sisters, have of late created so much disturbance in the tenement at 235 West Thirtieth street, where they live. that on Friday night they were turned out by the landlord and their furniture piled in the street. They got drunk and were executing a war dance around the vile when Policeman Barrett of the West Thirty-seventh street station arrested them. Haif an hour after their brother George came along, also intoxicated, and seeing the furniture set fire to it. Policemen Waitzfelder of the West Thirty-secutin street station got him and put out the fire, George said thet he was a shipping cierk and lived at 318 West Thirty-skith street with his grandmother, who is 70 years old. He had two bank hooks, representing $4,500, which he said he held in trust for his grandmother. Investigation showed that the woman was living in a wretched room, dirty and uncared for, and that she had been supplied with food for two years by the West Thirty-third Street Baptist Church.

George was taken to Jefferson Market Court station arrested them. Haif an hour

Sturtevent House Paral ups to be S td.

Notice of a sale of the furniture and bar fix tures of the Sturtevant House has been posted at the County Court House. The sale is to take place on Oct. 24, at 10 A. M., at the Sturtevant House. It is the result of a foreclosure of a chattel mortgage for $15,000 which the former proprietor, James C. Matthews, gave to Frank proprietor, James C. Matthews, gave to Frank
A. Pierson on March 27, 1841, jayable in a year. Pierson assigned the mortgage to J. E.
Jahvrin, and Jahvrin assigned it to Marveile
W. Cooper, who advertises the sale.
Cooper is one of the two trustees that was named by Albert P. Sturtevant, owner of the total and father in taw of Matthews, when in October, 1891, Matthews transferred the hotel to the trustees. The trustees selected by Matthews was William Waddell. Mr. Sturtevant then took chattel mortgages for about $70,000 from Matthews for money loaned. Since March last the hotel has been conducted by Mr.
Sturtevant.
